

Dear Santa,

I'm the new kid at Access Equestrian. My former job is a world away from the work I'm beginning at Access Equestrian, so there are plenty of things I don't totally understand. I never knew that standing quietly while my rider is mounting and adjusting stirrups was allowed! So much nicer than jumping all around and stressing out about getting right into work.

I have watched the others go out for lessons and have concluded that I'm missing some necessary work attire. First, I am lacking rainbow reins. I am massive, so I will need the 54" length. I also need new safety stirrups and leathers for my saddle. Apparently, the funny looking peacock stirrups with the rubber bands that pop off are no longer considered safe, so the humans are scrambling to replace them on everyone's saddles. Scarlet and I need an extra large set of stirrups that can't be found on Amazon, so if you could bring two pairs of those we would be so happy.

While I do my best to listen to my rider, sometimes noises outside the arena distract me. The school across the road has very noisy sports games while we are trying to work. I do better when I borrow Charlie's special ear bonnet. The part that covers the ears is thick so it muffles sound. I feel bad about always taking his, so I would like my own padded bonnet. Us fancy retired show horses like to have fancy kinds of things.

Please stop by my stall for some snuggles (and maybe sneak me a treat?),

Dillon
