

Dear Santa,

I may not be working in the arena yet, but like my mom, Audrey, I'm very observant. The instructors often use colored cones in their lessons as visual markers for steering exercises.

Unfortunately, my herdmates are less than careful with these cones. They often kick them or even step on them if the rider fails to guide them properly. I can't understand it. I would never be so careless with my feet! Alas, the working members of the herd seem to be senseless clodhoppers. If you bring us some sets of cones, there will be replacements handy for when a cone gets squished.

From the reddest mare to ever be red,

Iris
